DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
UNITED STATES GEOLOGICAL SURVEY,
Washington, D. C., January 20, 1904.

SIR: I transmit herewith, for publication as a bulletin, the revised manuscript of a gazetteer of Texas. This is a second edition, the first edition having been published in 1902.

Very respectfully,

HENRY GANNETT,

AREA.

Texas, formerly a State of Mexico, was settled in large part by United States citizens, who, not content to live under Mexican institutions, declared their independence of Mexico in 1835. A war followed, in which by the victory of San Jacinto and the capture of Santa Anna the State practically achieved its independence, although this was never formally acknowledged by Mexico. Soon after it sought, and finally in 1845 obtained, admission to the United States. As constituted when admitted it embraced, besides its present area, the region lying east of the Rio Grande which is now in New Mexico, extending north to the forty-second parallel. Its eastern limits coincided with the western limits of the United States as laid down by the treaty with Spain in 1819. In 1848 the eastern boundary of the State was slightly extended from the west bank of Sabine River and Lake to the center of the river and lake.

In 1850 the State sold to the General Government, for the sum of \$10,000,000, the region lying north of latitude  $36^{\circ} 30'$  and west of longitude  $103^{\circ}$  as far south as the parallel of  $32^{\circ}$ , now comprised in Kansas, Colorado, and New Mexico. This transfer of territory reduced the State to its present dimensions.

The present boundary line of Texas is as follows: Beginning in the Gulf of Mexico at the outlet of Sabine Lake, thence northward through Sabine Lake and up the middle of Sabine River to the point where that river intersects the thirty-second parallel, thence north along the meridian of that point of intersection to Red River, up Red River to the one hundredth meridian west of Greenwich, north on that meridian to the parallel of  $36^{\circ} 30'$ , west on that parallel to the meridian of  $103^{\circ}$  west of Greenwich, south on that meridian to the parallel of  $32^{\circ}$ , west on that parallel to its point of intersection with the Rio Grande, and thence down the main channel of the Rio Grande to its mouth.

The area of Texas is 265,780 square miles. It stretches in latitude from  $26^{\circ}$  to  $36^{\circ} 30'$ , and in longitude from  $93^{\circ} 30'$  to  $106^{\circ} 30'$ . In altitude it ranges from sea level to 9,000 feet in the summits of the western mountain ranges.

TOPOGRAPHY AND DRAINAGE.

The eastern two-thirds of the State is a plain, mainly with a rolling surface, sloping gently toward the southeast, and ranging in altitude from 2,000 feet to sea level. Between the one hundredth and one hundred and first meridians the land rises, in some places quite abruptly, to a plateau known as the Llano Estacado. This plateau, which has an altitude ranging from 2,500 feet in the south to more than 4,000 feet in the north, has an extremely level surface, upon which are few flowing streams. It extends westward nearly to Pecos River, and is succeeded beyond that stream by a region consisting of an alternation of irregular mountain groups and ranges alternating with broad, desert valleys, most of which are without outlet.

The average altitude of the State is 1,700 feet. The area is distributed in altitude as follows:

	Square miles.
0 to 100 feet.....	23, 000
100 to 500 feet.....	58, 400
500 to 1,000 feet.....	39, 380
1,000 to 1,500 feet.....	19, 800
1,500 to 2,000 feet.....	22, 200
2,000 to 3,000 feet.....	44, 100
3,000 to 4,000 feet.....	26, 100
4,000 to 5,000 feet.....	29, 800
5,000 to 6,000 feet.....	2, 000
Over 6,000 feet.....	400

Of the entire area 45 per cent is below 1,000 feet; 16 per cent between 1,000 and 2,000 feet; 17 per cent between 2,000 and 3,000 feet, while 22 per cent is above 3,000 feet.

The eastern part of the State is well watered by numerous streams, the principal of which are the Sabine, Neches, Trinity, Brazos, Colorado, Guadalupe, Nueces, and upon the Mexican boundary the Rio Grande. Upon the north of the State flows Red River, which heads in the Staked Plains, while across the Panhandle flows the Canadian River, a branch of the Arkansas. The western part of the State is scantily watered by the Rio Grande and its main branch, the Pecos. Most of the smaller streams flowing into these two rivers are dry during the greater part of the year.

CLIMATE.

Stretching over 13 degrees of longitude and 10½ degrees of latitude the State presents great variations in climate, ranging from that of the Tropics to that of the Temperate Zone and from excessive rainfall to very arid conditions. The mean annual temperature in southern Texas is about 75 degrees, from which it diminishes to 55 degrees in the Panhandle of northern Texas. The rainfall is heaviest in the eastern part of the State, where it exceeds 50 inches annually, and diminishes progressively westward, the average being only 10 inches annually in the neighborhood of El Paso, in the western part of the State. The line of 20 inches of annual rainfall, which is the approximate limit of agriculture without irrigation, follows closely the foot of the Llano Estacado. The rain which falls in the eastern half of the State comes mainly, if not entirely, from the Gulf of Mexico, and descends most abundantly in the winter months, while that which descends upon the western part is derived mainly from the Pacific Ocean and comes largely in the summer.

FORESTS.

Pl. III, B, shows in a general way the distribution of the forests of the State. The northeastern part is covered with forests of yellow pine, which are composed mainly of the short-leaved species, and which are valuable for lumber. West of this body two projections of woodland enter the State from Indian Territory and run far southward into it. These are known as the Upper and Lower Cross Timbers. The timber consists of black-jack and post oak, which has no lumber value, but is used only for firewood and other minor purposes. The western and extreme southern parts of the State, except the higher mountain summits, are entirely devoid of tree growth with the exception of mesquite, which in some localities, as in the neighborhood of San Antonio, grows to arborescent size. The Llano Estacado is timberless.

EXPLORATION AND SETTLEMENT.

The exploration of Texas began shortly after the occupation of Mexico by the Spaniards under Cortez. The well-known expedition of Coronado is believed to have crossed the Panhandle and to have journeyed in a northeasterly direction to Kansas or Nebraska. The earliest settlers within the limits of the State came from Mexico. Between 1820 and 1835 many citizens of the United States entered Texas from the northeast and established themselves within its limits. The Texas revolution was engineered and the war for its independence was fought by these settlers from the United States.

Shortly after Texas was admitted to the Union exploration began. The exploring expeditions were in charge of officers of the United States Army and were for the purpose of learning the resources of the country and discovering feasible railroad routes across the continent. By these parties the State was traversed in numerous directions and its principal topographic features were mapped.

The subdivision of Texas lands has not resulted in the production of maps of much value. The coast line has, however, been mapped by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, and since 1884 large areas in the central and western portions of the State have been mapped by the Geological Survey. These areas altogether aggregate 57,000 square miles, or more than one-fifth of the area of the State.

POPULATION.

The population of Texas in 1900 was 3,048,710, an increase of 813,187, or 36.4 per cent, during the preceding ten years. The following table gives the population at each census since 1850, the latter date being that of the first census taken after the admission of Texas to the Union:

Population of Texas at each census since 1850.

1850.....	212,592
1860.....	604,215
1870.....	818,579
1880.....	1,591,749
1890.....	2,235,523
1900.....	3,048,710

The average density of population in 1900 was 11.6 per square mile. The density, however, differs greatly in different parts of the State, being greatest in the central portion, while in the western part and upon the Staked Plains there is less than one inhabitant to the square mile.

In 1900 there were 16 cities having a population exceeding 8,000 each. The total number of inhabitants in these cities was 343,870, which may be regarded as the urban population. This constituted 11.3 per cent of the total population of the State. The population of the principal cities in 1900 was as follows:

Population of principal cities.

San Antonio.....	53,321
Houston.....	44,633
Dallas.....	42,638
Galveston.....	37,789
Waco.....	26,688
Fort Worth.....	26,688
Austin (the capital).....	22,258
El Paso.....	15,906

The population was divided as regards sex in the proportions of 51.8 per cent males to 48.2 per cent females. As regards race the population was composed of 79.7 per cent whites and 20.3 per cent negroes. The foreign born constituted 5.9 per cent of the total population, a proportion unusually large for a Southern State, and due to the fact that it includes a portion of the frontier.

Persons unable to read constitute 10 per cent of the total population. These illiterates were in large part negroes. The proportion of illiterates among this race constituted 27 per cent of the total number of negroes, while of the total number of whites only 6 per cent were illiterates.

For many years Texas has maintained a good system of public schools, including graded schools, high and normal schools, and a university, the latter located at Austin. The following are figures illustrating the extent of the system of graded schools:

School statistics.

Number of pupils enrolled .....	552, 503
Average attendance .....	370, 055
Days of school .....	111
Number of teachers .....	14, 989
Total amount of salaries .....	$4, 030, 188
Total expenditure for schools .....	$4, 476, 457
Average amount expended per enrolled pupil .....	$7. 25

The following table shows separately figures concerning the public and private high schools and normal schools:

Statistics of public and private high schools.

	Public high schools.	Private high schools.	Normal schools.
Number .....	201	64	9
Teachers .....	516	287	51
Pupils .....	12, 945	4, 619	1, 154

The following are the statistics regarding the colleges of the State:

College statistics.

Number .....	16
Number of professors and teachers .....	236
Preparatory students .....	1, 861
Collegiate students .....	1, 759
Graduate students .....	25
Annual income .....	$302, 833

Of the total population 34 per cent were engaged in gainful vocations. Classifying these wage-earners the result is as follows:

Classification of wage-earners.

	Per cent of total.
Agriculture .....	62
Manufactures .....	8
Trade and transportation .....	11
Personal service .....	15
Professions .....	4

From the above it appears that agriculture is foremost among the vocations of the people, and consequently is the most important industry.

INDUSTRIES.

In 1900 the number of farms in the State was 352,190, and the area included in them 125,807,017 acres; the average per farm was 357 acres, showing a great increase in the average size of the farm. The total area of improved land was 19,576,076 acres, or 11.5 per cent of the total area of the State. The average size of the cultivated area per farm was 6 acres.

Owing to its wide range of climate the agricultural products of Texas are varied. In the eastern and central parts the principal crop is cotton, although corn and wheat also are produced in large amounts. In the west the principal industry is the raising of sheep. The following table shows the principal farm products of the State:

Principal farm products.

Corn .....	bushels..	109,970,350
Wheat .....	do.....	12,266,320
Oats .....	do.....	24,190,668
Potatoes.....	do.....	1,342,316
Hay .....	tons..	1,494,305
Cotton .....	bales..	2,584,810

The following table shows the number of live stock:

Statistics of live stock.

Horses.....	1,269,432
Mules .....	507,281
Milch cows .....	861,023
Beef cattle.....	8,567,173
Sheep .....	1,439,940

The manufactures of the State are not of great importance. In 1900, however, there were 12,289 manufacturing establishments, with a total capital of $90,433,882. The employees of these establishments numbered 48,152, and there was paid to them in wages $20,552,355. For raw materials was expended $67,102,769, and the products had a value of $119,414,982.

Heretofore mining in the State has never been of great importance, but it is rapidly pushing to the front. Iron ores have been mined in the northeastern part of the State for several years. These are abundant, but of low grade. Coal has been found in several localities, but is nowhere mined on a commercial scale. Deposits of cinnabar have been discovered in the western part of the State, but the mines have not reached the producing stage. Gold, silver, and lead are found in few localities, but the product is of insignificant importance. Petroleum was discovered in 1900 in the southeastern part of the State, the initial discovery being made at Beaumont, and this discovery promises to become one of great importance.

The lumber in the State of Texas is of great and growing importance, although at the present rate of cutting it is probable that the forests will be greatly depleted in the near future. During the year 1900 the cut of lumber amounted to 1,232,404 M feet B. M.

LANDS AND SURVEYS.

When Texas became a State of the Union it retained not only jurisdiction but ownership of its public lands, and it has disposed of them as it chose. In its methods of surveying it has not carried out a consistent system, as has the United States with its lands, but has divided up the lands into lots of varied sizes and shapes, and with the utmost irregularity. Like the United States it has used its lands to foster the construction of railroads and to aid in the maintenance of common schools and the university. It has parted title to all its lands, retaining control, however, of the school lands, most of which, lying in the western, arid part of the State, have been leased for grazing purposes. The last of its lands, consisting of 3,000,000 acres, situated in the western part of the Panhandle, were deeded to private parties in exchange for the construction of the State capitol.

The State is divided into 244 counties.

RAILROADS.

Although Texas contains 9,722 miles of railroad only a small portion of the State can be said to be well connected by railway lines, and taking the State as a whole the development of this form of transportation is in a very incomplete condition. The northeastern portion of the State, between Fort Worth and Texarkana, and a strip of territory between Fort Worth and Galveston are fairly well intersected by railroads, but elsewhere this means of communication is scanty.

PUBLICATIONS OF UNITED STATES GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

[Bulletin No. 224.]

The publications of the United States Geological Survey consist of (1) Annual Reports, (2) Monographs, (3) Professional Papers, (4) Bulletins, (5) Mineral Resources, (6) Water-Supply and Irrigation Papers, (7) Topographic Atlas of United States—folios and separate sheets thereof, (8) Geologic Atlas of United States—folios thereof. The classes numbered 2, 7, and 8 are sold at cost of publication; the others are distributed free. A circular giving complete lists may be had on application.

The Bulletins, Professional Papers, and Water-Supply Papers treat of a variety of subjects, and the total number issued is large. They have therefore been classified into the following series: A, Economic geology; B, Descriptive geology; C, Systematic geology and paleontology; D, Petrography and mineralogy; E, Chemistry and physics; F, Geography; G, Miscellaneous; H, Forestry; I, Irrigation; J, Water storage; K, Pumping water; L, Quality of water; M, General hydrographic investigations; N, Water power; O, Underground waters; P, Hydrographic progress reports. This bulletin is the thirty-sixth in Series F, the complete list of which follows (all are bulletins thus far):
