INTRODUCTION

Background

The practice of surface mining threatens the Coal Beds of the Eastern Coal Province and the western region of the Northern Coal Province and the Western Coal Province. This group of sediment yields were determined using 18 miles of stream length study plots during the 1986 and 1987 seasons. The data were used to determine the relative amount of eroded material that reached the stream and was deposited downstream. The results are presented in this report.