This map is one of a series that depicts the geologic history, such as ground-levels, building footprints, and roads, for a specific area. The area shown is the Henley Lake Quadrangle, Idaho. The map includes a legend that explains the symbols used and a key that identifies different types of features on the map. The map also includes a reference section that provides additional information about the location and history of the area.