Figure 14.--The Gila River looking south and downstream from a point 2 miles above the mouth of the San Carlos River. The old channel and natural levees are raised above the adjacent flood plain. The open water at left center is an off-channel pond. The railroad fill at the abandoned bridge is the dark horizontal line across the center of the photographs. Photographed August 18, 1965.