ABSTRACT

Hydrologic studies concerned with surface water require geographic data of several types, among which are stream length and size of drainage area from which runoff is contributed. This gazetteer presents all drainage-area data on New York streams that were available as of October 1980.

The information is grouped by river basin, and each section consists of two lists. The first gives sites alphabetically by stream name and includes the body of water to which the stream is tributary, county in which the site is located, drainage area above the mouth, coordinates of the topographic quadrangle on the State index map, and the Geological Survey site number. The second list presents site information by U.S. Geological Survey site number (downstream order along the main stream) and includes drainage area, distance of measurement site above the mouth, and location by latitude and longitude.

Data were compiled from published and unpublished sources, all of which are available for inspection at the U.S. Geological Survey in Albany, N.Y. Also included are updated values on several river basins that have been redelineated and whose drainage areas have been recomputed and retabulated since 1977.

INTRODUCTION

New York State has several thousand miles of rivers and more than 4,000 lakes, ponds, and reservoirs. Together these provide a vast number of recreation areas and supply large quantities of water for industry, municipalities, and agriculture. In most parts of the State, these rivers and lakes constitute a major part of the local water resources.

Two characteristics of the rivers and lakes that are basic to water-management planning are the drainage area above each measurement site and the number of miles from the site to the mouth. In 1977, the U.S. Geological Survey, in cooperation with the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, the New York State Department of Transportation, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, began a program to obtain this information on all named streams within New York and to compile it for publication.

The first phase of the program entailed compilation of drainage-area and river-mile data from all files and administrative reports that were available as of October 1980; this volume presents those data as well as updated information on several river basins that were redelineated and whose drainage areas have been recomputed and retabulated since 1977. The second phase of the project entails compilation of river miles and drainage areas from the latest U.S. Geological Survey topographic maps. Drainage areas are to be determined for all streams with basin areas exceeding 10 mi<sup>2</sup> (25.9 km<sup>2</sup>), all named streams with basin areas exceeding 5 mi<sup>2</sup> (13.0 km<sup>2</sup>), and also at significant structures on these streams such as dams and bridges. Compilations under Phase II have been completed for five of the 15 major basins of the State; these are the Delaware, Black, Genesee, Erie-Niagara, and St. Lawrence River basins. Compilations also have been completed for about 10 percent of the small drainage areas within the Lake Ontario, Lake Champlain, and Hudson-Mohawk basins. Drainage areas yet to be completed include uncompiled areas of the partially completed basins and all of the Oswego, Allegheny, and Susquehanna River basins. Data compilations for river basins completed under Phase II are to be published as supplements to this report.

Acknowledgments

This study was started in 1977 and is continuing in cooperation with the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, the New York State Department of Transportation, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

METHOD OF DATA COMPILATION

Drainage divides of all streams were drawn on the latest U.S. Geological Survey topographic quadrangle maps. Before 1978, the outlined areas were measured with a rolling planimeter; thereafter they were measured with an electronic digitizer. Procedures were those outlined by the Federal Inter-Agency River Basin Committee (1951). Boundaries of streams flowing into or out of New York were verified against maps of adjoining States to ensure agreement of drainage-area boundaries.

Stream lengths were also measured by electronic digitizer. The streams were measured on the maps in segments starting at the divide. All segments were added together to obtain the number of miles to the mouth; then, the distance from the divide to each site was subtracted from the total to obtain number of miles from the site to the mouth (miles above mouth).

Maps used were U.S. Geological Survey topographic 15-minute quadrangles (scale 1:62,500), 7.5-minute quadrangles (scale 1:24,000), and 7.5- by 15-minute quadrangles (scale 1:25,000). Location of all quadrangles is indicated on plate 1. Quadrangle names are listed alphabetically in table 1A; their map-location codes are listed in numerical order in table 1B.

All maps used in data compilation for this study are available for inspection at the U.S. Geological Survey office in Albany, N.Y.

METHOD OF DATA PRESENTATION

Data in this gazetteer are grouped by river basin. Locations of the major river basins of New York are depicted in figure 1; the hydrologic units (geographic subregions) in which drainage areas were recomputed before October 1980 are shown in figure 2.

Most of the data presented herein are values given in previously published and unpublished records. Also included are data on the basins of the Erie-Niagara, Genesee, Black, Oswegatchie, Grass, Raquette, St. Regis, Salmon, and Delaware Rivers, which were recomputed during 1978-81 under the second phase of this study.

For convenience, the data for each river basin are presented in two lists. The first gives the sites alphabetically by stream name and includes the name of the body of water to which the stream is tributary, the county in which the site is located, the drainage area above the site, in square miles, coordinates of the topographic quadrangle on the State index map (pl. 1), and the Geological Survey site number. The second presents site information by U.S. Geological Survey gaging-station or site number (all measurement sites are in numerical order) and includes drainage area, in square miles, distance of measurement site above the mouth, in miles, and location by latitude and longitude. County locations are shown in figure 1; the State index map (pl. 1) indicates the location of all quadrangles.

DOWNSTREAM ORDER AND STATION NUMBERS

Hydrologic-station records in U.S. Geological Survey reports are listed in downstream order along the main stream. All stations on a tributary entering a main stream are listed before the next main-stream station; stations on a tributary that enters between two main-stream stations are listed between them. Stations on first, second, and other ranks of tributaries are listed in similar order. An example is given in figure 3, which depicts a typical river section with tributaries and station numbers.

In this report, the lists of sites in downstream order are indented to show the stream rank and the stream to which they are immediately tributary. The main stem is the first rank, and each indentation represents one additional rank. For example, if a stream is indented one rank, it is tributary to the stream listed above or below it. In the list of river basins (p. iv-v), the rank of each tributary is similarly indicated. This downstream-order and indentation system indicates which stations are on tributaries and the rank of these tributaries.

Each site is identified by an 8- or 10-digit number that reflects the downstream order described above. Gaps are left in the series to allow for the addition of new sites; hence, the numbers are not consecutive. Eight-digit numbers such as 03041000 identify sites where hydrologic data have been collected; 10-digit numbers have been assigned to sites at the mouth of streams, to sites directly upstream and downstream from major tributaries (as in fig. 3), to sites at dams, and to sites from which no hydrological data other than drainage area are available. In some areas, it has been necessary in recent years to use a 10-digit number for some of the sites where hydrologic data have been collected because no gaps were available between the 8-digit numbers.

Use of Index Code in Table 1

The index code in the left column of the following table refers to the location coordinates in plate 1. The diagram below illustrates use of this system. For example, the location of a 7.5-minute quadrangle (Alexander) designated J-07-2 is indicated by shading. J indicates the position on the Y-axis of plate 1, 07 indicates the position on the X-axis, and 2 indicates the position within the 15-minute coordinates. If the source map were a 7.5- x 15-minute metric sheet, the suffix A or B would be used in place of numbers 1-4. (In 1978, the U.S. Geological Survey began the metric series to replace the 15-minute series.) A zero as the last digit indicates that only a 15-minute topographic map was available at the time of gazetteer preparation.

GAZETTEER OF NEW YORK STREAMS, BY RIVER BASIN

How To Use This Compilation

This gazetteer is a compilation of drainage areas upstream from stream sites and includes data on site location. The streams are grouped by river basin. Each basin section consists of two lists; list A gives stream names alphabetically; list B gives them by site/station number.

Some basins contain streams for which drainage areas had not been computed as of this writing. To determine whether a particular stream or site is included, refer to list A in the appropriate river-basin section (basins are delineated in fig. 1; corresponding page numbers are given on pp. iv-v). Additional data (miles above mouth and latitude-longitude) may be located in list B from the site/station numbers in list A.

EXPLANATION OF HEADINGS

LIST A

Site/station name

Name of each site or station listed.

Tributary to

Body of water into which a named stream flows.

County

County in which the site is located. (County locations are given in fig. 1.)

Drainage area

Area above a point on a stream, measured in a horizontal plane, that is enclosed by a topographic divide from which direct surface runoff from precipitation normally drains by gravity into the stream above the specific point. Given in square miles.

Quad number

Coordinates of quadrangle on index map (pl. 1).

Site/station number

U.S. Geological Survey number assigned (in downstream order) to each site.

LIST B

Site/station name

Name of each site or station listed.

Site/station number

U.S. Geological Survey number assigned (in downstream order) to each site

Drainage area

Area above a point on a stream, measured in a horizontal plane, that is enclosed by a topographic divide from which direct surface runoff from precipitation normally drains by gravity into the stream above the specific point. Given in square miles.

Miles above mouth

Distance, in river miles, from stream mouth upstream to site.

Latitude and longitude

Given in degrees, minutes, and seconds.
