

Figure 5. Diagram showing the effects of pumping on the freshwater lens, northern Guam, (A) widely spaced wells pumping at uniform rate causing slight rise in transition zone, (B) closely spaced wells causing brackish water from the transition zone to rise into the wells and reducing the area with para-basal water.